

Ashley Palmer was elected to the FMA board in 2015 and is currently the chair of the communications committee. Ashley is a Child Inclusive Family Mediator Family Law Consultant and Psychotherapist, with a passion for helping families in conflict.

She believes that seeing the children and offering them a voice within the mediation process is key. Ashley has written and published the first ever Handover Book for separating families and is always looking for ways to make the process of lowering the family conflict more accessible.

Ashley has an appetite for continuous learning and sharing any skills that might help others. She has recently contributed to developing an app for the FMA and continues to highlight the benefits of Family Mediation by organizing the 5 day national Family Mediation Campaign in January.
